Drysdale Lecture Theatre,
City University, Northampton Square, London EC1V 0HB

Designers and Contractors: Conflict or Co-operation?

Paul Nowak
(Chief Geotechnical Engineer, Atkins)

The BGA are pleased to invite you to the second ECM event of 2014. Having worked as both Contractor and Designer, Paul Nowak will share a personal view on the relationship between Contractors and Designers on major civil engineering projects over the last 35 years and how this relationship has evolved with changes in contractual conditions.

There will be time for debate and discussion with coffee served from 6pm and refreshments provided after the event. Thanks are extended to our generous sponsors Byrne Looby Partners and City University for hosting the event.

Paul Nowak BSc, ARSM, CEng, MICE, MIMMM, CGeol, FGS, has over 35 years of experience in infrastructure design and construction. He is currently a Chief Geotechnical Engineer at Atkins. After graduating with a degree in Geology from Imperial College, London he has worked for both consultants and contractors. More recently he has been involved in D&B and DBFO projects including M25 Widening, M74 Completion, Dubai Metro, Gautrain project in South Africa and South Fraser Perimeter Road in Vancouver. Paul was a Section Editor and author of the Earthworks Section of the ICE Manual of Geotechnical Engineering and is currently undertaking an update of Earthworks – A Guide. He was also a member of the ICE Site Investigation Steering Group.
